

URGENT WARNING: 26-Year Investment Research Veteran Sounds the Alarm: You Must Act Now to Protect Yourself Because...

A Devastating U.S. Debt Implosion is Now Unavoidable

Crippling hyperinflation – and financial disaster for thousands – could be just weeks away...

Brace yourself.

Within the next few weeks, the United States could find itself in the midst of a full-blown debt crisis of historic proportions.

You may have read about the recent catastrophe in Greece.

Or maybe you saw the story in the New York Times about a month ago that warned:

“Fears over the European financial crisis began to spread from the weaker countries to healthier ones, including Italy and Belgium, and even much stronger Germany.”

-- New York Times, November 30, 2010

Maybe you think a full-blown debt crisis is something that only happens overseas.

But let me tell you...

The danger here in the United States right now – thanks to the unprecedented levels of government spending – is very real...and it's infinitely more dangerous than what has happened in Europe.

Thousands of innocent, unsuspecting investors are at risk of losing their life savings...their homes...and their entire way of life.

This situation is dire.

And like it or not, the dominoes have already begun to fall.

- Jefferson County, Alabama defaulted on $227 million in warrants earlier this year after a botched deal left the county more than $5 billion in debt...
- Harrisburg, Pennsylvania just narrowly avoided defaulting on a $3.3 million bond payment last month when the city was bailed out by the state of Pennsylvania...

"Sovereign debt crises aren't just for foreigners anymore. It appears quite likely that the United States will face one."
-- Fortune

- In San Diego, California – the eighth-largest city in the U.S. – the possibility of declaring bankruptcy has been publicly debated as a way to solve the city's $2.1 billion pension fund deficit.
- This is just the beginning. No fewer than 48 states are facing a combined shortfall of $200 billion in their fiscal budgets. That amounts to 30% of state budgets...the largest in history!
- And that's just at the state and local level. At the federal level, the United States government is printing money – and accumulating debt – at historic levels...and in the process, they're bringing the country to the brink of a catastrophic financial collapse.

But don't just take my word for it...

Government Insiders Warn: This Situation is Much Worse Than People Realize

Chances are, you've never met David Walker...and I doubt you'd recognize his face if you saw it on television.

Few people would.

But David Walker was the U.S. comptroller general from 1998 to 2008.

So when he speaks about the state of the U.S. government's balance sheet...he knows what he's talking about.

Walker says that "our situation is really much worse than people realize." And he warns that we're within three years of becoming the next Greece.

That's right – the man who was the chief auditor of the federal government for ten years thinks we're on the brink of a full-blown debt crisis here in the United States comparable to what's happened in Greece.

"We suffer from a fiscal cancer. It is growing within us. And if we do not treat it, it could have catastrophic consequences for our country."

-- David Walker on 60 Minutes television program

In fact, Walker was warning of disaster as far back as 2006 – well before the historic economic meltdown that began in 2007.

New the situation is even worse.

But David Walker's not the only one sounding the alarm.

On November 26 the chairman of the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation (FDIC), Sheila Bair, wrote an editorial in the Washington Post titled, "Will the next financial crisis start in Washington?"

In the piece, Bair described in detail the enormity of the U.S. government's debt load and openly wondered just how much longer it would be before a full-blown crisis erupts. Here's a portion of what Bair had to say...

"Relentless federal borrowing will directly threaten our financial stability... Financial markets are already sending disquieting signals..."

How the Municipal Bond Market Could Spark a Historic Financial Collapse

The municipal bond market – at this very minute – has all the ingredients needed for financial disaster. Tell me if any of these sound familiar...

* We're dealing with a massive market – at last count, the municipal bond market accounted for more than $2.8 trillion...

* We're dealing with a market that is highly leveraged...

* And we're dealing with a market filled with questionable analyst ratings. As Warren Buffett himself said...there isn't a financial analyst on the planet who knows for sure what these things are really worth.

Uh oh...here we go again.

Again...those are strong words from a government insider – but there are plenty more...

On July 27, the non-partisan Congressional Budget Office released a report that got very little attention.

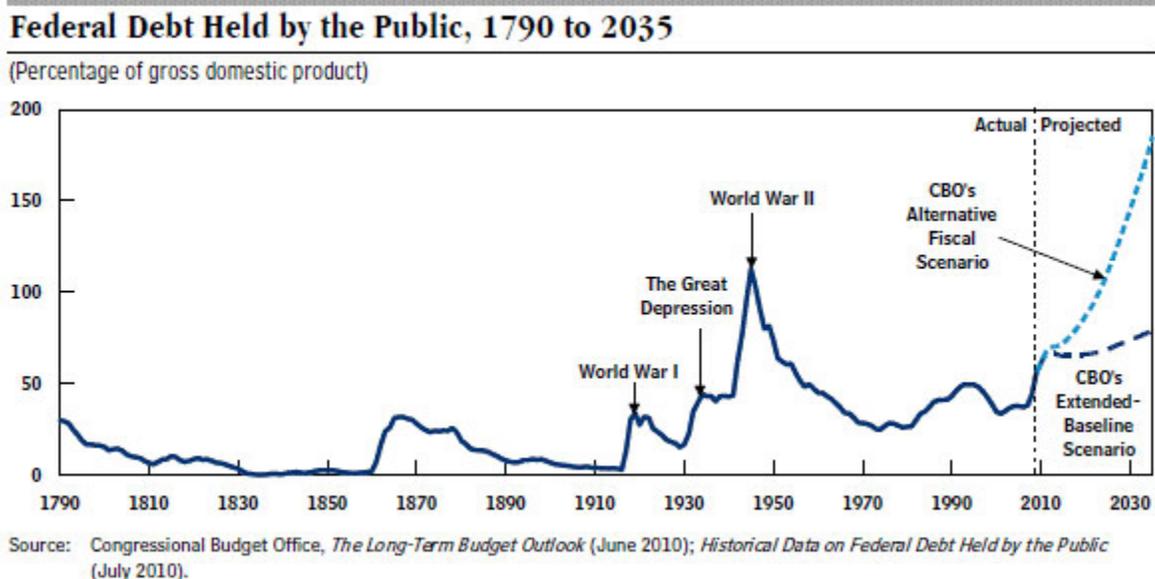

But it should have been front-page news.

The CBO warned that unless the federal government can curtail its spending – and soon – this nation's soaring debt could spark devastating hyperinflation and a historic financial crisis similar to those experienced in Greece and Ireland earlier this year.

Sound familiar?

Here's an excerpt from the CBO report:

"Over the past few years, U.S. government debt held by the public has grown rapidly – to the point that, compared with the total output of the economy, it is now higher than it has ever been except during the period around World War II."

And while the thought of levels of debt not seen since World War II is frightening...this is what really grabbed my attention (emphasis is mine):

"A growing level of federal debt would also increase the probability of a sudden fiscal crisis... As other countries' experiences show, it is also possible that investors would lose confidence abruptly and interest rates on government debt would rise sharply. The exact point at which such a crisis might occur for the United States is unknown."

"Other countries – instead of just charging higher interest rates – could decide to take their money elsewhere, which could spur inflation and increase financial uncertainty."
-- CNN.com

I know what I'm writing about sounds bad – and it is.

The urgency is real...and the U.S. financial outlook is bleak.

But there is something you can do – today – to protect yourself in the midst of this epic collapse.

You see...I've uncovered an often-ignored investment vehicle that has a proven history of helping investors through inflationary periods.

And make no mistake – the inflationary period we're on the verge of entering figures to be historic.

So it's vitally important that you have a "secret weapon" like this one on your side.

I'll tell you more about how you can add this powerful, inflation-busting vehicle to your portfolio in just a minute.

But first, let me tell you...

What Will Happen Next in the Coming U.S. Debt Implosion

As I mentioned earlier...the dominoes have already begun to fall.

Jefferson County, Alabama, and Harrisburg, Pennsylvania were just the beginning of what figures to be a long line of municipal bond collapses.

But again...don't just take my word for it:

"Some cities are in even worse shape than Harrisburg. Central Falls, Rhode Island, recently went into receivership when it couldn't pay its bills. San Diego is said to be considering bankruptcy to get out from under its pension obligations. Miami's city council, hoping to avoid Harrisburg's fate, recently used emergency powers to slash city salaries and pensions and is now instituting hefty traffic fines and garbage fees. This year, ratings agencies have cut the debt in several cities – including Littlefield, Tex., Detroit, Mich. and Bell, Calif. – to junk."

-- CNNMoney.com, September 15, 2010

Now that we've already seen a handful of municipalities begin to crumble, here's what will happen next...

Step One – More Defaults...and More Bailouts

As more and more municipalities begin to default, the federal government will feel compelled to take action. The state of Pennsylvania bailed out Harrisburg – but Pennsylvania itself is already in dire straits.

So you've got local governments being bailed out by states...and states in need of their own bailouts...and that's where the federal government will step in with even more cash.

"Defaults on municipal debt have been rising... It bears all the hallmarks of a crisis in waiting."

-- CNNMoney.com, September 15, 2010

After all...which states are "too big to fail"?

With a combined shortfall of $200 billion projected, the potential exists for a significant bailout by the federal government within the next six months.

Here's more bad news: No less an investing authority than Warren Buffett has already told the United States government that the municipal bond market could provide the spark for the next great financial crisis.

When Buffett testified before the U.S. Financial Crisis Inquiry Commission in June, he was asked by the Commission's chairman about the next big risk to our economy.

Buffett's reply?

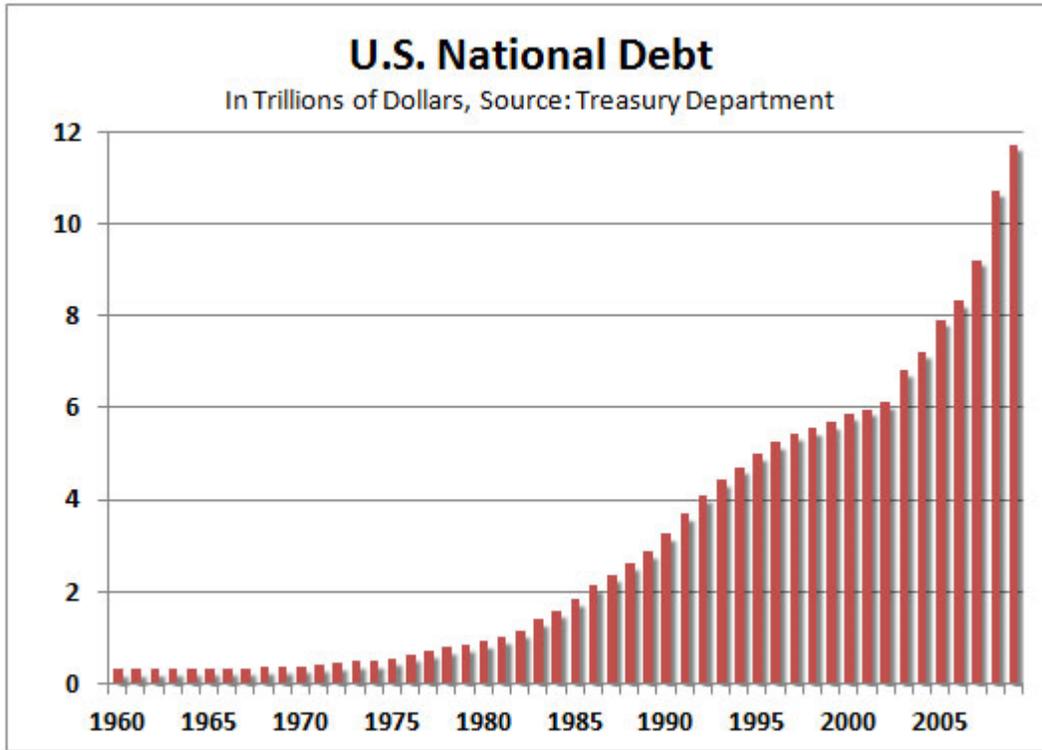

"If you are looking now at something where you could look back later on and say, 'These ratings were crazy,' [municipal bonds] would be the area. I don't think [Moody's or S&P] or I can come up with anything terribly insightful about the question of the state and municipal finance five or 10 years from now except for the fact there will be a terrible problem..."

Step Two – Borrowing is No Longer an Option

These new municipal bailouts, of course, are on top of the already unprecedented government spending.

The U.S. national debt is currently at $13.4 trillion – an astounding figure.

That works out to $43,585 worth of debt for every man, woman and child in the United States right now – or nearly $100,000 per U.S. household.

And those figures were calculated before the impact of the latest round of “Quantitative Easing” from the Federal Reserve, which is estimated to have a $900 billion price tag before all is said and done.

So at some point – and I think it's coming sooner rather than later – the U.S. government will no longer be able to easily borrow money.

When you have historic levels of debt – and borrowing is no longer an option – you really only have three options for getting out:

You can raise taxes...you can cut spending...or you can print more money.

Two of those three will kill your re-election chances...so they're out.

But the third has a potentially devastating long-term impact.

Step Three – Say Hello to Hyperinflation

The report from the Congressional Budget Office was very specific when it came to the numbers.

But the timing of just when the "tipping point" will occur for a devastating financial crisis is not something that can be accurately predicted.

When the dam bursts – and I think it could happen at any time – the results will be crippling.

I'm talking about a surge in consumer prices that could be as high as hundreds of percent per day...thousands per month...and quite possibly even millions per year.

Imagine the panic – the sheer panic – that will set in if a gallon of gas suddenly soars to $30 or more. How will Americans react when a pound of hamburger comes with a $25 price tag?

We all know it's coming...remember – even Alan Greenspan sees it coming:

"The federal government is currently saddled with commitments for the next three decades that it will be unable to meet in real terms."

-- Alan Greenspan in the Wall Street Journal, June 18, 2010

But remember – there's still time for you to take a few simple steps to protect yourself and your hard-earned money.

I'll explain exactly what you need to do – and how easily you can do it – in just a minute.

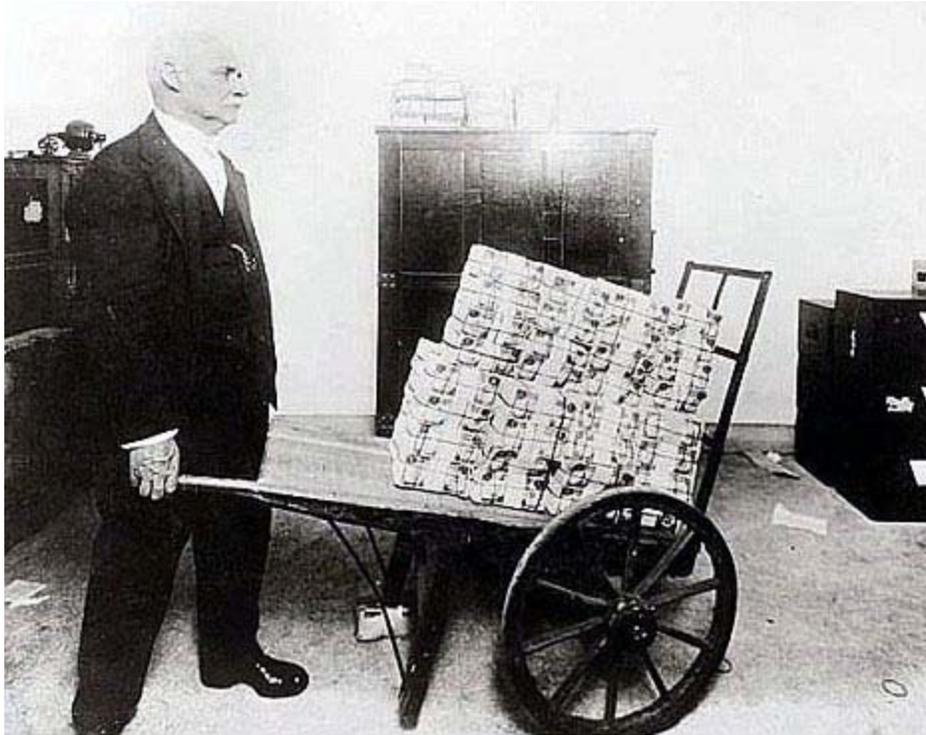

First I need to tell you just how devastating this potential collapse can be...

Are You Prepared for the Coming U.S. Debt Implosion?

We've all heard the stories about paper money becoming virtually worthless overnight in the classic examples of hyperinflation.

And while it's not likely that a wheelbarrow full of $20 bills will be needed to buy a loaf of bread...

"55% of Americans in an April 8-11 Gallup poll are 'very concerned' inflation will climb, and another 29% are 'somewhat concerned.'"
-- Gallup, May 3, 2010

It's also not outside the realm of possibility.

When the Coming U.S. Debt Implosion begins – and make no mistake...this is going to happen – it will trigger another stock market collapse.

Almost every American is vulnerable.

Your exposure – in your retirement accounts...your mutual funds...your trading portfolios – is virtually limitless.

Those safe "income funds" you're invested in? What's their exposure to potential defaults on municipal bonds?

How much exposure do you have to the stock market? Would a sudden 20% collapse have an impact on your retirement?

If you don't know the answers to these questions...I'm afraid you may be extremely vulnerable at this very moment.

Here's How to Protect Yourself as the Collapse Unfolds

No question about it...we're looking at one of the most serious threats to your wealth that you'll face in your lifetime.

No one can say for sure when this crisis will hit...it could happen at any time.

As I mentioned before, there is one simple step you can take – starting today – to protect your wealth.

You see...a while back I discovered a unique investment vehicle that provides steady income while at the same time offering protection during dangerous financial times.

I like to refer to these investments as "Financial Catastrophe Insurance Vehicles (F.C.I.V.s)" – and for good reason.

Let me tell you a little more about how they work...

* F.C.I.V.s have outperformed bonds by a whopping 8-to-1 margin for 35 years.

* F.C.I.V.s beat the S&P 500 by 9:1 in the last 5 years.

* F.C.I.V.s are a favorite investment vehicle of some of the world's greatest investors, including Warren Buffett and John Paulson. Buffett alone bought 8 million shares in just a matter of months!

* F.C.I.V.s have a proven history of performance – they've been paying investors consistently since 1950...and they'll continue to do so for as long as capitalism is an economic force.

I've spent the last two decades testing – and proving – the overwhelming success individual investors can enjoy by investing in F.C.I.V.s.

In fact – I've helped one group of individual investors just like you earn an average 13.34% return every year...and that's via my safest available portfolio.

And now – today – in the face of a potentially historic U.S. Debt Implosion – I'm writing to show you how you can put these F.C.I.V.s to work for you so you can protect your wealth during the difficult times ahead.

Introducing...Financial Catastrophe Insurance Vehicles: The Most Powerful Income Investment Ever Created

My name is Roger Conrad...and I'm the editor of an advisory service that was specifically designed to take maximum advantage of the power of F.C.I.V.s.

So what exactly are "F.C.I.V.s"?

You may know them by another name: Essential services.

Amazingly, even though more than 100 years of market history prove they outperform everything else for income, safety and growth, most investors overlook the essential services industries.

Services like electricity, water and communications. There is nothing more stable, secure, safe and growing.

It's true that the United States can do without another Starbucks or a faster computer. It can even do without Google and eBay.

But even in the worst of times – when we're facing runaway inflation...a free-falling stock market...or record levels of government spending – it still can't do without lights, heat or clean drinking water.

That single irrefutable and immutable fact is central to every investment decision I've made since 1989, when I started my investment advisory, Utility Forecaster.

Since then essential services stocks – otherwise known as F.C.I.V.s – have given my subscribers unwavering wealth.

For over 21 years, subscribers have been living well with average annual returns of more than 13.34%.

That's in the safe portfolio. But even my ultra-conservative high-income portfolio has averaged 10.24% over its 12 years.

And that's not counting the power of growing and reinvested dividends.

Double Your Income Overnight

Doubling your income without increasing your risk isn't as hard as you've been led to believe.

Instead of $25,000 a year you could be earning $50,000 – on the same size portfolio!

In fact, you could start earning double your current income as soon as tomorrow in utility stocks so stable that they've paid and raised dividends nearly every year for a quarter of a century or more.

And because these stocks have a history of delivering consistent returns – even in the midst of economic turmoil – you'll have the peace of mind that comes with side-stepping the Coming U.S. Debt Implosion.

- One stock in my Utility Forecaster portfolio yields 7.2% today, and has raised dividends 22 times in the last ten years alone. Since I first added the stock to our portfolio, it has given subscribers a whooping 176.57%.
- Another "F.C.I.V." pays 5.6% like clockwork 12 times a year. Since recommending it to subscribers only 9 months ago, it has shot up 115%.
- A third "F.C.I.V." has raised dividends four times in three years, including a huge 40% bump last quarter. Recent earnings are up 48% over a year ago. I recommended the stock to subscribers 66 months ago and we've already made 121%. But the stock is still well below its high, so there's a whole lot of profit left to this run!

You may notice, too, that each of those stocks paid and raised dividends right through the market crash of 2000, the energy slump of 2002 and the 2007-2009 recession.

Just like an endless stream of income should.

Warren Buffett and Carl Icahn Are Loading Up on F.C.I.V.s – Here's Why You Should, Too

When the world's best investors buy what you're buying, it's always a good sign.

Today utilities are cheap enough for Buffett and strong enough for Icahn to pick up huge interests, and that's just what they're doing left and right.

Over the last two years Buffett's been loading up on power generation, natural gas pipelines and power distribution companies. As the economy worsened over the second half of 2008, he packed in utilities like a squirrel packs in acorns before a long winter. Buffett bought three million shares of one "ute" and then went back for five million shares more just a few months later.

And he's not the only one. Carl Icahn bought 2.4 million shares of a major power company recently.

I have a few new stock ideas I have a hunch they'd both be interested in – way undervalued, with above-average yield and solid histories of earnings and dividend growth. Even better, they're in a sector that is pivotal to global growth and priced to soar, launching you out of losses and all the way to spectacular returns.

Buy these stocks today and you could already be earning double your current income by tomorrow and setting yourself up for some of the biggest capital gains you've ever had.

The Very Best Utilities You Can Buy Today to Protect Your Wealth During the Coming Collapse

As I've said...my carefully-selected essential services stocks will keep your income steady during these dangerous economic times.

Not only that...they could also be the first to soar out of recessionary times, as they traditionally do.

Layer those strengths on top of accelerating trends and your total returns could outstrip the wind!

Even while the economy struggles to get back on its feet – and even in the face of an imminent U.S. Debt Implosion – unstoppable trends are gaining force.

You're standing at the threshold to the future, the intersection where the world's dwindling resources crash into its growing need for water, power and instantaneous global communications.

More than ever before, the companies that fail to introduce or adopt new technologies will wither and die. But companies that lead the way with solutions to our need for clean, plentiful, renewable, inexpensive technology and services will dominate.

"Our national debt as a percentage of the economy is more than 61%, breaching the 60% line for only the second time in the nation's history. (The last time was during World War II.)... Those numbers add up to a bleak future for America. And yet despite this mounting evidence of a looming budget crisis, we as a nation just can't seem to focus on tackling the issue."

-- Fortune, September 10, 2010

Invest in those companies and you'll be tapping into a stream of income that will last for at least another generation.

It's still early in the game, but a few companies are already in the lead. Their technologies and vision are far ahead, and others will have a hard time catching up.

Here's what I mean...

Utility Blockbuster #1 – A Liquid Gold Rush

Mark Twain predicted our global water crisis more than 100 years ago when he famously said, "Whiskey's for drinking, water's for fighting over." Scarce even then, it's in critically short supply now...and the situation is quickly getting worse.

One water stock in my Utility Forecaster portfolio is in the profit sweet spot. They're locking in one territory after another, expanding aggressively with 60 acquisitions in the last two decades.

What's more, the company is sure to benefit from their enviable position as water scarcity becomes even more of a problem.

More than 400 million cubic meters of groundwater are pulled from Arizona aquifers every year, twice what's being replaced by rainfall. That's just one microcosmic example of what's going on all over America...and the world.

But there's a new opportunity I'm recommending right now.

Countless technologies, from the harebrained to the heroic, are being tested and put in place to quell the looming crisis.

But the companies that control the water will control the wealth. And this company controls the water supply and distribution in some of the most crucial regions in the U.S. Invest in this company and the income from this stock alone could fuel a healthy retirement. For reliable income – and income growth – you can't do better.

But that's just one of the opportunities I see on the horizon...

Utility Blockbuster #2 – Powering China

This company – founded in 1901 – is one of the world's oldest, most reliable power producers/distributors. Their long-established power contracts fuel a steady stream of cash payouts to you from that ongoing business. Meanwhile they're reaching out to dominate more and more regions.

Right now they're building the world's largest solar plant in Australia, and they just inked a deal for two wind-generated power plants in India with combined output of 183.2 megawatts.

Plus they just opened a 1,200-megawatt coal-fired plant in China that was completed on schedule and built for half what it would cost in the West.

Now they've built and are operating China's premier nuclear power plant, which is also being used as China's nuclear training grounds to pump out a steady stream of engineers to man the plants.

All those projects are good reasons why they've beaten the Dow in just about every time period over the past 10 years. Their stock is climbing steadily from its 2008 low, and is on track to keep growing for many years to come.

Yet even with that growth the stock still trades at less than $20 today, and trading volume is so low that I'm amazed so few investors have found this hidden gem.

I'll introduce it to you – along with several others – and I'll tell you how to invest in just a moment. Right now, though, I need to tell you about...

Utility Blockbuster #3 – A Communications Game-Changer

The world of communications is about to experience another game change, and it's going to hit you right at home.

Internet protocol television (IPTV) already has 28 million subscribers, and is expected to jump 264% by 2014. The global downturn made barely a ripple in the growth of Internet television, thanks in part to Asia's strong growth performance.

A battle is brewing between the world's biggest carriers to see who will own the space. Two will win.

Both are undervalued today, but one is an especially good buy, and I expect its stock to shoot up 150% in the next five years as it leaps ahead in subscriber numbers.

You don't get chances like this very often. One of the world's most stable companies, with plenty of free cash flow to pay out four times a year in hefty checks to shareholders.

The stock is off its high, giving you a perfect buying opportunity. Get in now and enjoy the income, but hold on tight for the growth ahead!

Now here's the thing...

I want you to have everything you need to take full advantage of these "utility blockbusters" – starting right now.

I've prepared three brand-new research reports that describe each of these opportunities – for both profit and wealth preservation – in clear detail.

Utility Forecaster has been called "the nation's leading advisory" on utilities, and I've been called "one of the top independent analysts of the essential services industry."
